正年PD (Professional Development)

Certain "global competencies" are necessary for today's university graduates when entering an increasingly interconnected and A simple mastery of English language diverse work environment. knowledge and skills is unlikely to be sufficient to meet the challenges facing language learners who are entering a 21st century global workplace. Students must learn how to transfer the database of English knowledge and skills to new and challenging contexts.

One step in helping English language learners make the jump from English "knowledge and skills" to "global competencies" is the addition of a presentation and discussion skills database. It is my goal to integrate various lectures, workshops and activities into the B2 English Communication curriculum that encourage learners to start building an infrastructure of "communicative resourcefulness". emphasis is on body control, energy, poise, and especially rhythm.
